

Parador de Villafranca del Bierzo

The Parador:

The small town of Villafranca del Bierzo, between León and La Coruña, was originally a traditional staging post for pilgrims heading for Santiago de Compostela. In 1809 it was the scene of a notable battle, when Spanish militia forced the French garrison to surrender. The Parador de Villafranca del Bierzo, which has recently undergone extensive refurbishment, is built in a traditional Galician style, with grey slate roof, and walls combining stonework and whitewashed plaster. The hotel is located at the entrance to the city in a very beautiful area, with the Sierra Ancares rising beyond the gardens and is easily accessible from local road networks.
